About the company

Satellite

Satellintelligence is the market leader in remote sensing technology for sustainable sourcing with the mission to halt deforestation. They provide traders, manufacturers and agribusinesses with critical sustainability insights. These empower them to minimize their global environmental footprint and track their progress against climate objectives, to ensure a sustainable supply chain.

Founded in 2016, Satellintelligence has more than forty employees who work in Utrecht, The Netherlands, and in Asia, Africa, and South America. They deliver clients with data and insights on their supply chain assets, planted crops, ecosystems, and risks. These are all provided within a traceability platform that helps companies prove compliance and emission reduction throughout their value chains.

Global corporations including Mondelez, Bunge, Cargill, Unilever, and Raboban work with Satellintelligence to minimize their global environmental footprint. By combining data from ESA and NASA satellites with AI-powered predictive modeling and in-depth local expertise, the scale-up helps its clients gain more control on their supply chains, which are often complex and scattered. ►

Satelligence's subscription services provide value to every party directly or indirectly involved in agriculture, from farmers, traders, manufacturers, and agribusinesses, to financial institutions with agricultural investments. Their real-time dashboards and reports allow clients to track their progress against climate objectives, protecting them from risks like deforestation and inspiring them to operate more sustainably.

Satelligence has been growing fast and works tirelessly to expand its client base and expand its services. Now they need an Advisor with specific expertise to boost its growth strategy. ►

Vacancy

Advisor

Satelligence is seeking an Advisor to enhance their strategic outlook by providing expert knowledge and guidance. This role is vital in complementing Satelligence’s work and strengthening its newly formed Advisory Board with fresh perspectives, extensive experience, and valuable networks.

The Advisor’s responsibilities include presenting various viewpoints to challenge the status quo, aiding the board and the Management Team, and representing various companies with different backgrounds. To succeed, this role will identify with Satelligence’s mission, is eager to assist with introductions, share knowledge, and enhance the company’s credibility in key domains, opening doors to new prospects and partners.

Knowledge in areas such as compliance, supply chain, scaling technology, exit strategy, or finance is essential. The Advisor will engage in one to two annual sessions, focusing on specific themes or topics, to provide strategic advice and perspectives. They will be integrated into Satelligence’s community, gaining experience in advisory roles and participating in community events, and forums with industry leaders. ►

Satelligence aims to create a robust community of key stakeholders, including advisors, ambassadors, clients, governmental bodies, universities, and partners. They will drive dialogue, share insights, and promote best practices, reinforcing Satelligence's position as an industry thought leader. This role is ideal for an energetic and entrepreneurial individual eager to play an active role in the growth of this innovative technology scale up. n

“The Advisor can be instrumental to help us on our journey to grow our business in a sustainable way and help us meet our ambitious goals.”
